Diana Ezerex is heading back behind bars this spring – musically.

Since 2017, the German-Nigerian artist has been bringing music into prisons across the DACH region, offering inmates a brief escape from everyday life. With 45 prison concerts already behind her, she continues her journey this year with a March tour across five correctional facilities.

The tour kicks off on March 24 in Bielefeld-Brackwede, followed by Berlin/Tegel (March 25), Volkstedt (March 26), Wittlich (March 27), and concludes on March 28 in Dortmund. On this tour, Diana Ezerex will primarily perform songs from her latest project, "IDENTITY," staying true to her mission of bringing music to unexpected places.

For eight years, she has been committed to making music accessible in unconventional spaces, creating moments of connection inside prison walls. With a background in education & social sciences, philosophy, cultural mediation, and popular music, she strives to push artistic boundaries and reach audiences beyond traditional venues.

Her prison concerts bridge the gap between confinement and the freeing power of music, offering a sense of hope and inspiration. The people she meets behind bars, their stories, and the emotions they share continue to shape her artistic journey. These encounters deeply influenced her 2021 album, "My Past's Gravity."
